

Voices on True Shoes from middle schools:

“As the story progressed, I got more and more excited. This is so relevant to today and some of the things we deal with in our own school.”

Mark Domeier, English teacher

NRHEG High School

New Richland, MN

“Just read the first chapter aloud to the class. Wish I had videotaped the reaction! I love how you really nailed the subtle differences in 8th grade dialogue compared to 7th grade. Fantastic.”

Joshua Safran, Language Arts teacher

Edmunds Middle School

Burlington, VT

“As a teacher, it is so encouraging to give a book to students that they will LOVE, even the most reluctant reader. True Shoes is again one of those rare stories that all students will want to read .”

Barbara Raak, Language Arts teacher

Fennville (MI) Middle School

“I thought the sequel rivaled *The Revealers. It held a realistic perception of the negative effects that cyberbullying can cause . It also showed how pressures caused not only by peers, but by family as well, can lessen your enjoyment of 7th or 8th grade, a time when most of us find our true selves. A must read for those who can't help but connect with the characters and understand what they're going through.”

Artemis Brown, eighth grader, Fennville Middle School

Buy the new book on Amazon.com , and at a 20% discount here .

There's much more on this site! Click on The Revealers to see how middle schools across the U.S. are using my best-known book to build both literacy and awareness of bullying.

Click here

for briefings on the best projects, plus unit study plans and many other usable resources.

Visit

my blog

for updates on my adventure in independent publishing, on how schools can address cyberbullying, on creative-writing outlets for young writers on the Web, and more. Look down the blog to see how middle schoolers helped us develop the true-to-life cover for

True Shoes

.

Thanks for visiting. Don't stop here!

Doug Wilhelm